A: The problem is that the line `Directory.CreateDirectory(Path.GetDirectoryName(str));` can cause the filename to exceed the maximum path length. This would be possible in the case that the full path would be `{TheDirectoryOfYourExe}\{SomeNameOfThatDirectory}\{SomeNameOfThatFile}.xml` For example: `C:\test\subdir\file.xml` would be `"C:\test\subdir\file.xml"` (two levels of `\` in the filename) `C:\test\subdir\another\file.xml` would be `"C:\test\subdir\another\file.xml"` (three levels of `\` in the filename) `C:\test\subdir\subdir\file.xml` would be `"C:\test\subdir\subdir\file.xml"` (four levels of `\` in the filename) Note that this is not the same problem with the above mentioned Stack Overflow question. There, the full path would look like: `{TheDirectoryOfYourExe}\{SomeNameOfThatDirectory}\{SomeNameOfThatFile}.ext` `C:\test\subdir\file.xml` which would not cause an infinite recursion because the `\` cannot be escaped. Your attempt to fix this would be to create the directory first and then write the file. Try this code: `int success = Directory.CreateDirectory(Path.GetDirectoryName(str)); if (success == 0) throw new IOException(Path.GetFileName(str) + " could not be created.");` Q: Pagination with Laravel 4 & Bootstrap I have a question about Laravel pagination. How can I use pagination instead of the standard PageController on Laravel 4? I have read that I can use the paginate helper function and pass it to my view, but I don't know how to retrieve the records per page. A: You are right. You can achieve this using the paginate function like so: `public function index() { $posts = Post::paginate(10); return View::make('blog.index', compact('posts')); }` Now the pagination will appear in the blade `50b96ab0b6`
